INTRODUCTION TO THE TOPIC OF THE SYMPOSIUM

The 46th International Symposium of Philosophy and Theology Professors, organized this year by the Catholic Faculty of Theology of the University of Zagreb, in co-organization with the Catholic Theological Faculty of the University of Graz, the Faculty of Theology of the University of Ljubljana, the Catholic Faculty of Theology of the University of Sarajevo and the Catholic Faculty of Theology in Đakovo of the Josip Juraj Strossmayer University in Osijek, will take place in Hotel Trakošćan (near the Trakošćan Castle) from 4 to 6 April 2024.

The topic of this year's symposium is Talking about God Today. Perspectives of Religious Language in Contemporary Theology and Philosophy.

Since the beginning of Christianity, one of the central problems of theological and philosophical thought has undoubtedly been the problem of religious language: how to adequately talk about God? Humankind's earliest insights into the encounter with the Holy, which in themselves express "fascinans et tremendum", have culminated with different discourses, ideas, written testimonies, religious statements, and systems about the Holy, the Absolute, the Transcendent and God. As this is true on a general (religious) level, it is even more true when we think about the possibilities of expressing and talking about God from a Judeo-Christian perspective. Starting with the earliest insights into how the Holy Scriptures represented God's speech in the guise of human speech, the meeting of faith, the kerygma and Greek philosophy as the fundamental starting points of theology, through the negative theology of the church fathers, the analogical speech of medieval philosophers and theologians, and polemics revolving around the question of universals, all the way to contemporary issues regarding verification and falsification, Wittgenstein's language games, hermeneutic philosophy, the linguistic turn in philosophy, narrative theology, structuralism and post-structuralism, the question of the conditions allowing for the possibility of speaking about God turns out to be a permanent question of Christian theology and philosophy. In the contemporary contemplations of the idea of God and the related discourse, psychology and the issue of human consciousness increasingly take their place in philosophical and theological debates.
